LAID TO REST.

The Dead Vice President's Funeral Obsequies.

By Telegram to The Sentinel.

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—The day is brighter than yesterday. The early trains brought delegations from the national capital and all the leading cities of the union, together with an influx of people from all the interior cities and towns of Indiana and Illinois.

The cabinet was represented by Bayard, Lamar, Whitney, Endicott and Vilas. The supreme bench of the United States was represented by Associate Justices Matthews and Blatchford, and the United States senate and house of representatives by large committees. The governors of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Kentucky were present, attended by their staffs and numerous state officers. Ex-President R. B. Hayes and General William T. Sherman were distinguished guests. The arrivals swelled the multitudes on the streets to an enormous mass of people. Washington street presented a black mass of humanity hours before the services were entered upon at St. Paul's cathedral. The whole city may be said to be in funeral garb. A detail of the police force and soldiery kept the sidewalks clear in front of the Hendricks' mansion to enable the close friends and relatives of Mrs. Hendricks and members of the respective committees to gain admission to the house.

At 9 a. m., Mrs. Hendricks entered the parlor for

HER LAST LEAVE TAKING.

The ordeal was the most trying and the desolate woman seemed utterly prostrated, crying to the last to the day so soon to be hidden forever from her view. Impressed with the placid and life-like appearance of the dead, she desired to preserve this last scene and so, late as it was, she sent for a photographer to take

While the photographer was engaged at his work the members of the cabinet, judges of the supreme court and others from Washington, gazed on the dead. It was 11 o'clock when the casket was replaced and a stream of visitors again passed by and out through a side door. Shortly preparations were made for the final removal of the body. This was done without further leave-taking. The little cavalcade moved quietly with United States military escorts through the densely lined streets to the cathedral of St. Paul. The casket was borne into the church at 11:30 o'clock, the vast congregation having already been seated, with the exception of the immediate relatives. The officiating clergy, four in number, Rev. Bishop Knickerbocker, Rev. Dr. Stringfellow, of Montgomery, Ala., first rector of St. Paul's; Rev. Dr. Fulton, of St. Louis, former rector of St. Paul's; and Rev. Dr. Jencks, the present rector, in their robes of black, met the remains at the main entrance. Bishop Knickerbocker voiced the opening sentence of the burial service: "I am the resurrection and the life," followed by Rev. Drs. Stringfellow and Fulton in their recitation of the other verses used for the dead until the casket had been carried and placed outside the chancel. The great audience stood while the impressive scene was acted. Following the bier came the widow, leaning on the arm of her brother, followed by other relatives. When the casket had been placed in front of the chancel rail, the choir sang the anthem, "Lord, Let Me Know My End." The lesson for the dead was then read by Rev. Dr. Jencks, followed by singing the hymn, "Lead, Holy Light." Rev. Dr. Jencks, speaking from the lectern, then delivered the

FUNERAL ADDRESS.

Rev. Dr. Jencks took for his text: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true; whatsoever things are honest; whatsoever things are just; whatsoever things are pure; whatsoever things are lovely; whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. iv., 8. The reverend doctor dwelt upon the lessons taught by the exemplary life and industrious habits of Mr. Hendricks, the purity of his political career being eloquently alluded to. Mrs. Doner, of Chicago, sang "Rock of Ages," the bishop closing with prayer and benediction. The casket was then borne from the church edifice. The place of honor was accorded to Ex-President Hayes.

The bells of all the city churches began tolling when the remains were taken from the house and continued during the church rites and while the procession was on its long march

TO CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

The column was preceded by a mounted police escort. The hearse was drawn by six black horses, wearing the black trapping worn by the horses that drew the funeral car at the obsequies of General Grant.

THE FUNERAL CAR

occupied the central position in the second grand division. Following the hearse came the carriage containing Mrs. Hendricks, Miss S. W. Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Thornton. The succeeding twelve carriages contained relatives and near friends.

EX-PRESIDENT HAYES

occupied the next carriage and was followed in regular order by the members of the cabinet, United States senators and representatives, governors and staffs, United States judiciary, ex-United States senators and representatives, United States military officers, state officers of Indiana, followed by presidents and faculties of universities and colleges, the mayors of cities and other civil officials.

The third division was composed of all non-military organizations. They marched as follows:

Cook County Democratic club and the Iroquois club, of Chicago.

Duckworth club, of Cincinnati. Jackson club, of Columbus, Ohio. Jeffersonians, of Dayton, Ohio. Jeffersonian club, of Bloomington, Ill. Miami club, of Hamilton, Ohio. Jeffersonian club, Fort Wayne. Gramercy club, Vincennes, Ind. Hendricks club, Peru, Ind.

The fourth grand division was made up of local municipal organizations, including the fire department with steamers heavily decked. The column took up the line of march at 12:48 p. m., but progress was retarded in the business district owing to the blockading of crowds which far outnumbered the moving column. It proceeded slowly through the great masses of people. The carriages were driven three abreast. The movement was slow. The bands were playing dirges, making the progress at times almost imperceptible until the column merged upon Meridian street, beyond the city limits. When the head of the column came within sight of the cemetery the Indianapolis light artillery began to fire minute guns, which was continued until the

HEARSE APPROACHED THE GRAVE.

Shortly before the column entered upon the final stage of its journey, sleet began to fall sharply, accompanied by a cold wind. The column entered the cemetery under a splendid stone arch, completed yesterday. When the hearse had halted near the lot, the

WASHINGTON, November 30.—Adjutant-general Drum has received the following telegram from Gen. Crook: "Sanches brought into Fort Apache last evening the head of one of the hostiles named Ogare. Quelah. He also reports that the hostiles are killing all the white mountain Indians they can find scattered over the reservation. It seems probable that up to this time they have killed eleven women, four children and five men and boys. The white mountains threaten to retaliate on the Chiracahuas remaining on the reservation, but these are close to Fort Apache and carefully guarded."

HONORING THE LATE VICE PRESIDENT. The first assistant postmaster general to-day issued the following order:

By the direction of the postmaster general, postmasters will close their respective offices between the hours of 12 o'clock noon, and 5 o'clock p. m., on Tuesday, December 1st, out of respect to the memory of Thomas A. Hendricks the late vice-president of the United States.

NOTES.

The president to-day appointed C. E. Resseguie, postmaster at Ludington, Michigan, vice Fayette Brown. Governor Squire of Washington Territory, in his report to Secretary Lamar, gives the population of the territory at 129,438, an increase of 36,930, in two years.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., November 30.—James Revel, manager of Harris' museum, is missing. Mr. Harris says Revel is a defaulter for at least $6,000. He is from New York, but managed the Pittsburgh museum before he came here. His mother was induced to draw money to pay the bills. Revel paid part of the amount to get the paper extended and appropriated the balance. Too fast living.

LOUISVILLE, November 30.—The trial of Wm. and Humphrey Best, charged with murdering Green Bailey, colored, in June, 1884, at Lancaster, Ky., began to-day. Both boys are minors and are sons of the late Ebenezer Best, who killed seven men and had always been acquitted. The boys were left a fine estate by their father, and while intoxicated they shot Bailey. They quit the country but returned recently and gave themselves up.

CINCINNATI, November 30.—At today's session of the circuit court it was agreed that according to the decision in the case of the Republican senators the nine candidates on the Republican ticket for representatives, were elected. One Republican, Robert Harlan, a colored man, is defeated. It was decided that Judge Hueston (Democratic) was elected. The Democrats are making arrangements to carry all the cases before the state supreme court.

LYNCHBURG, Va., November 30.—Henry Mason, the negro, who killed J. R. Hammersly, white, near Campbell Court House a week ago, was taken from the jail at 2 o'clock this morning and hanged to a tree, and his body rid-dled with bullets.

It has also been arranged by the members of the cabinet, not to go to a hotel in Indianapolis, but to occupy the special cars as such.

All Quiet.

PITTSBURG, November 30.—There was no trouble at Coal Valley to-day. The strikers assembled about the Pine Run mines in large numbers this morning, but no attempt at violence was offered.

PITTSBURG, November 30.—In the fourth pool a small number of men returned to work this morning at Noll's mines, but at Gregg's and Wood's the diggers do not feel inclined to go to work until the trouble is over. This is due to the fact that several non-unionists have been caught and severely beaten and their homes pelted with stones. During the night, in one instance, a bullet was fired through the window of a miner's house, passing but a few inches from the miner's wife, who had her babe in her arms. The sheriffs of Washington and Fayette counties, each with a posse of men, are still on duty, but their services have not been required.

The Chronicle special from Lucyville Pennsylvania says: There were fifteen strikers arrested at Lucyville this afternoon, for participation in the riot Friday and Saturday last. Everything is quiet there to-day, at the coal mines and there was no truth in the rumor that the strikers were about ready to begin a second attack on the men working.

The Missouri Miners.

By Telegram to The Sentinel.

ST. LOUIS, November 30.—For some time past there has been quite a disturbed condition of the mines about five miles from Macon, Missouri. The miners there struck for higher wages, during the summer and the operators imported a lot of negroes to work the mines and built a stockade to protect the men. This created a very bad feeling and several little outbursts occurred. Last Saturday a collision occurred in which one white and one colored man were killed. Another man was killed last night and the situation was considered so critical, that Governor Marmaduke went to the scene, and after looking over the ground, ordered out the 1st regiment of Missouri guards in this city and about 400 will go by special train at 2 a. m. to the scene of trouble to preserve the peace.

War on Telegraph.

By Telegram to The Sentinel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—President Bates of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company has received the following despatch:

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.

The supreme court of Louisiana to-day affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company vs. the Morgan, Louisiana & Texas railroad company and Western Union telegraph company. This suit was originally brought to enable the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph company to build its line on the right of way of the railroad company between New Orleans and Lafayette, 144 miles. The right was awarded, damages assessed and paid into the court and the case appealed in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph company, which claimed an exclusive right of way under its contracts of the usual character. To-day's decision establishes the right of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company. The motion of the Western Union company to remove the case to the federal court, was denied.

The sad affair so deeply grieved the husband that a few hours later, he swallowed several ounces of chloroform and is now lying unconscious with little hopes of recovery. Mrs. Schroyer, it is thought, suicided, because of the dissolute habits of her husband.

Fully five hundred persons went by the Muncie route, one hundred and fifty by the Wabash and about forty by the Grand Rapids. Full particulars of the funeral will be found in our telegraphic columns.

Kind Words from Judge Taylor.

The following letter from our fellow-townsmen, Judge R. S. Taylor, is reproduced from the Indianapolis Journal of this morning:

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 28.

W. H. Miller, of the Committee on Arrangements:

DEAR SIR—It is with deep regret that I find it impossible to be present at the bar meeting, of which your telegram advises me. I hope it may be largely attended.

No other men know each other so well as lawyers. And in all the assemblies of the people that will be held in memory of the deceased vice president, there will nowhere be present so true an appreciation of the qualities of the man himself as in the meeting of the bar of Indiana. As governor, senator, vice president he was known to all the world, and his fame in those high places is part of the common heritage of the American people. But as a lawyer he was, in a peculiar sense, our associate, our friend, our brother.

I accord to him a place on the highest seat in our profession. He was my ideal of an advocate. His style was clear, calm, dignified to the border of reserve, and yet dangerously persuasive. There are few great orators who are safe patterns for others. Usually their success is due largely to some striking idiosyncrasy or peculiarity of style or manner, which can be caricatured, but not imitated. Not so with Mr. Hendricks. He had no mannerisms—no tricks of speech, no oddities of thought. His oratory was clean, strong, convincing, persuasive English, without a touch of meretricious ornament. His speeches were fit models for us all, and, as models, safe to imitate however impossible to emulate.

He was toward me an elder brother in a family too large for close intimacy all around; but no kinder one ever stood in that relation.

I desire to express my concurrence in whatever action may be taken by the meeting. Sincerely yours,

R. S. TAYLOR.

Frank Robbe and the Mule.

The Denison, Texas, Herald-News, contains the following of a person well known to the citizens of Fort Wayne: "After Dr. Lighthall gets through, the crowd generally leaves, but in doing so, they miss one of the best features of the entertainment. It is the great mimic, Prof. F. L. Robbe. He is really wonderful in his imitations of birds and animals; also of different musical instruments. Yesterday while amusing the crowd, a mule that was hitched to a wagon turned himself loose and brayed in his loudest tone, as much as to say, do that if you can. The professor looked at the bold animal for a few moments, a look of sorrow overspreading his face, for he felt sorry for the poor beast. He threw open his mouth and brayed until the mule became ashamed of himself and started for home, satisfied that there is one animal that can beat him braying."

Attention!

I am requested by the chairman, Mayor Muhler, who is absent from the city, to give notice to the executive committee for the memorial services of the late Vice President Hendricks, to meet at my office, Wednesday, Dec. 2, at 2 o'clock p. m. A full attendance is desired. The following gentlemen compose the committee: Hon. Charles F. Muhler, Charles A. Munson, Samuel M. Foster, Hon. M. Hamilton, James M. Kane, esq., George H. Wilson, esq., E. A. K. Hackett, D. S. Keil, M. V. B. Spencer, W. D. Page, Hon. Charles McCulloch, O. P. Morgan, esq., O. A. Simons, esq., Hon. R. C. Bell, DeGroff Nelson, Hon. S. M. Hench, Hon. E. A TRIP TO THE MOON.

Jacques Courbeaudocq's Wonderful Achievement.

The Lovers—The One Condition—The Mysterious Riddle and Its Solution—The Journey—“Saved! Saved!”—The Return—Wedding Bells.

AFTER JULES VERNE.
(Robert D. Brain, in Texas Sitings.)

CHAPTER I.

Jacques Courbeaudocq was a lawyer.

He was a criminal lawyer.

It is sometimes difficult to distinguish which is the criminal, and which is the lawyer, but let that pass.

Lawyers are men who collect claims on a five per cent. basis.

You get the five per cent.—the lawyer gets the rest.

Lawyers get more rest than any other class of professional men.

Jacques had red hair.

It was so fiery that the building inspector ordered him to wear a fire escape down his back.

The foregoing statement is poetic license

—that is, it is a lie.

Jacques loved a beautiful maid named

Jondrette.

Jondrette's papa was a retired sausage manufacturer from Chicago.

He had been knighted by the New York

Genealogical Bureau on payment of forty dollars. The trinity of life to him was his pipe, cheese and beer.

Love for Jondrette caused Jacques' heart to beat wildly from morn to night.

THE JOURNEY.

cheese knife and forty pounds of humorous papers.

When they reached the top of the elevator they looked straight up and commenced to laugh. They read and laughed, and laughed and read.

People said “they are mad.”

For five days and five nights they laughed.

At the end of that time they had no weight. Their gravity was completely overcome.

They could float in space.

With a glad shout they sprang out into the ether, and began to paddle like mad men for the moon.

On and on they sped, paying their respects to the Big and Little Bear, the Seal,

the Walrus, and other animals in the celestial menagerie. They said to a huge star:

“Who are you?”

“Uranus,” was the reply.

“You’re another,” said they.

At which the stars in their courses

groined in chorus.

The journey is at last over and with a glad cry the voyagers strike cheese firma.

In a trice Jacques cuts a huge fragment from the surface of the moon, and wraps it in a silk handkerchief.

“Let us descend,” said he.

CHAPTER II.

A glorious full moon throws her splendid radiance o’er the palace of Jondrette’s papa

in Fifth avenue.

The sickly bull-dog is pouring forth his soul in the back yard.

A young man kneels at the feet of Jondrette’s papa. His hand is clasped in the lily-white flipper of Jondrette.

Jondrette is weeping.

In a short space of time she had shed

four quarts of tears.

To be more explicit—a gallon.

Nothing would soften the hard heart of the old man.

In vain they threatened to commit suicide and other crimes.

“Will nothing move you, hard heart?”

gasped Jacques.

“Yes, Monsieur, she is yours—”

A wild cry of joy broke from the lips of the happy pair, and rang and re-echoed through the awful silence of the dark dungeon—no we mean through the richly-furnished apartment. (The fact is we were getting this story mixed with next week’s romance, and beg the reader’s pardon for the mistake.)

“On one condition,” continued the old man, with a scornful laugh.

“That you bring me a chunk of the green cheese from which the moon is made, to eat with my beer,” said the old man, with a hideous leer.

Jondrette gave a low moan and fell fainting over a King Anne rocking chair.

“I will do it,” said Jacques.

CHAPTER III.

For days Jacques tasted nothing.

He pored night and day over works on astronomy.

Memory and appetite alike failed.

THE OLD CANAL.

The Wabash and Erie canal, that in the childhood of Indiana, served as a nursing bottle for the young giant developing its resources and making manifest the splendid possibilities of the most productive state in the union, has gone into the mire and yellow leaf, slipped into a neglected old age, and from being the pride and glory of all Hoosierdom, is now only the object of their sneers and exonerations. The Delphi Times, in commenting upon its present dilapidation, remarks that the old canal bed through this city and as far north as the river, presents a complete illustration of the ruin wrought by the ravages of time. From the principal highway of commerce that developed a state, it has fallen into a condition of not only absolute uselessness but into an unquestioned nuisance. Stagnant water accumulates in the lower places and is repulsive even to the wabbling duck and the wandering goose. The old tow-path that once resounded with the "thwack" of the mule-driver's lash, has melted away and in places is too narrow to afford a path for a marauding pig. Throughout its length there isn't water enough to wet the rudder of the "Minnie Bell" or the "Lillie Dale," the pride of early navigators, and all the canal water that could be accumulated wouldn't wet down a cocktail for an old-fashioned captain. The old guard-lock has decayed and will afford no protection against the next high water, and there is little or nothing to prevent the Wabash from changing its course and coming down the canal like a tidal wave. The glory of the old canal has passed away and in a few years will live only in the memories of the oldest inhabitants—and the stories of the early minstrel who related the celebrated tragedy where "The chambermaid and three men more Took refuge on a sycamore."

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 1.—The day is brighter than yesterday. The early trains brought delegations from the national capital and all the leading cities of the union, together with an influx of people from all the interior cities and towns of Indiana and Illinois.

The cabinet was represented by Bayard, Lamar, Whitney, Endicott and Vilas. The supreme bench of the United States was represented by Associate Justices Matthews and Blatchford, and the United States senate and house of representatives by large committees. The governors of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Kentucky were present, attended by their staffs and numerous state officers. Ex-President R. B. Hayes and General William T. Sherman were distinguished guests. The arrivals swelled the multitude on the streets to an enormous mass of people. Washington street presented a black mass of humanity hours before the services were entered upon at St. Paul's cathedral. The whole city may be said to be in funeral garb. A detail of the police force and soldiery kept the sidewalks clear in front of the Hendricks' mansion to enable the close friends and relatives of Mrs. Hendricks and members of the respective committees to gain admission to the house.

At 9 a. m., Mrs. Hendricks entered the parlor for

HER LAST LEAVE TAKING.

The ordeal was the most trying and the desolate woman seemed utterly prostrated, crying to the last to the day so soon to be hidden forever from her view. Impressed with the placid and life-like appearance of the dead, she desired to preserve this last scene and so, late as it was, she sent for a photographer to take

While the photographer was engaged at his work the members of the cabinet, judges of the supreme court and others from Washington, gazed on the dead. It was 11 o'clock when the casket was replaced and a stream of visitors again passed by and out through a side door. Shortly preparations were made for the final removal of the body. This was done without further leave-taking. The little cavalcade moved quietly with United States military escorts through the densely lined streets to the cathedral of St. Paul. The casket was borne into the church at 11:30 o'clock, the vast congregation having already been seated, with the exception of the immediate relatives. The officiating clergy, four in number, Rev. Bishop Knickerbocker, Rev. Dr. Stringfellow, of Montgomery, Ala., first rector of St. Paul's; Rev. Dr. Fulton, of St. Louis, former rector of St. Paul's; and Rev. Dr. Jencks, the present rector, in their robes of black, met the remains at the main entrance. Bishop Knickerbocker voiced the opening sentence of the burial service: "I am the resurrection and the life," followed by Rev. Drs. Stringfellow and Fulton in their recitation of the other verses used for the dead until the casket had been carried and placed outside the chancel. The great audience stood while the impressive scene was acted. Following the bier came the widow, leaning on the arm of her brother, followed by other relatives. When the casket had been placed in front of the chancel rail, the choir sang the anthem, "Lord, Let Me Know My End." The lesson for the dead was then read by Rev. Dr. Jencks, followed by singing the hymn, "Lead, Holy Light." Rev. Dr. Jencks, speaking from the lectern, then delivered the

FUNERAL ADDRESS.

Rev. Dr. Jencks took for his text: "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true; whatsoever things are honest; whatsoever things are just; whatsoever things are pure; whatsoever things are lovely; whatsoever things are of good report; if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things."—Phil. iv., 8. The reverend doctor dwelt upon the lessons taught by the exemplary life and industrious habits of Mr. Hendricks, the purity of his political career being eloquently alluded to. Mrs. Doner, of Chicago, sang "Rock of Ages," the bishop closing with prayer and benediction. The casket was then borne from the church edifice. The place of honor was accorded to Ex-President Hayes.

The bells of all the city churches began tolling when the remains were taken from the house and continued during the church rites and while the procession was on its long march

TO CROWN HILL CEMETERY.

The column was preceded by a mounted police escort. The hearse was drawn by six black horses, wearing the black trapping worn by the horses that drew the funeral car at the obsequies of General Grant.

THE FUNERAL CAR

occupied the central position in the second grand division. Following the hearse came the carriage containing Mrs. Hendricks, Miss S. W. Morgan and Mr. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Thornton. The succeeding twelve carriages contained relatives and near friends.

occupied the next carriage and was followed in regular order by the members of the cabinet, United States senators and representatives, governors and staffs, United States judiciary, ex-United States senators and representatives, United States military officers, state officers of Indiana, followed by presidents and faculties of universities and colleges, the mayors of cities and other civil officials.

The third division was composed of all non-military organizations. They marched as follows:

Cook County Democratic club and the Iniquity club, of Chicago.
Duckworth club, of Cincinnati.
Jackson club, of Columbus, Ohio.
Jeffersonians, of Dayton, Ohio.
Jeffersonian club, of Bloomington, Ill.
Miami club, of Hamilton, Ohio.
Jeffersonian club, Fort Wayne.
Gramercy club, Vincennes, Ind.
Hendricks club, Peru, Ind.

The fourth grand division was made up of local municipal organizations, including the fire department with steamers heavily decked. The column took up the line of march at 12:48 p. m., but progress was retarded in the business district owing to the blockading of crowds which far outnumbered the moving column. It proceeded slowly through the great masses of people. The carriages were driven three abreast. The movement was slow. The bands were playing dirges, making the progress at times almost imperceptible until the column merged upon Meridian street, beyond the city limits. When the head of the column came within sight of the cemetery the Indianapolis light artillery began to fire muffled guns, which was continued until the

HEARSE APPROACHED THE GRAVE.

Shortly before the column entered upon the final stage of its journey, steel began to fall sharply, accompanied by a cold wind. The column entered the cemetery under a splendid stone arch, completed yesterday. When the hearse had halted near the lot, the

CASKET WAS BORNE TO THE GRAVE.

THE LOWERING OF THE CASKET.

Rev. Dr. Jencks read the committal service, the bishop closing with prayer and benediction. Only the wife and her supporters approached the grave. The remaining multitude standing off silent spectators. This closed the last sad scenes of the burial of Thomas A. Hendricks, vice president of the United States.

WASHINGTON, November 30.—Adjutant-general Drum has received the following telegram from Gen. Crook: "Sanchez brought into Fort Apache last evening the head of one of the hostiles named Ogaré Quelah. He also reports that the hostiles are killing all the White Mountain Indians they can find scattered over the reservation. It seems probable that up to this time they have killed eleven women, four children and five men and boys. The White Mountains threaten to retaliate on the Chiricahuas remaining on the reservation, but these are close to Fort Apache and carefully guarded.

PITTSBURGH, November 30.—There was no trouble at Coal Valley to-day. The strikers assembled about the Pine Run mines in large numbers this morning, but no attempt at violence was offered.

PITTSBURGH, November 30.—In the fourth pool a small number of men returned to work this morning at Neil's mines, but at Gregg's and Wood's the diggers do not feel inclined to go to work until the trouble is over. This is due to the fact that several non-unionists have been caught and severely beaten and their homes pelted with stones. During the night, in one instance, a bullet was fired through the window of a miner's house, passing but a few inches from the miner's wife, who had her babe in her arms. The shortage of Washington and Fayette counties, each with a posse of men, are still on duty, but their services have not been required.

The Chronicle special from Lucyville Pennsylvania says: There were fifteen strikers arrested at Lucyville this afternoon, for participation in the riot Friday and Saturday last. Everything is quiet there to-day, at the coal mines and there was no truth in the rumors that the strikers were about ready to begin a second attack on the men working

The Missouri Miners.

By Telegram to The Sentinel.

ST. LOUIS, November 30.—For some time past there has been quite a disturbed condition of the mines about five miles from Macon, Missouri. The miners there struck for higher wages, during the summer and the operators imported a lot of negroes to work the mines and built a stockade to protect the men. This created a very bad feeling and several little outbursts occurred. Last Saturday a collision occurred in which one white and one colored man were killed. Another man was killed last night and the situation was considered so critical, that Governor Marmaduke went to the scene, and after looking over the ground, ordered out the 1st regiment of Missouri guards in this city and about 400 will go by special train at 2 a. m. to the scene of trouble to preserve the peace.

War on Telegraph.

By Telegram to The Sentinel.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—President Bates of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company has received the following despatch:

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30.

The supreme court of Louisiana to-day affirmed the judgment of the lower court in the case of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company vs. the Morgan, Louisiana & Texas railroad company and Western Union telegraph company. This suit was originally brought to enable the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph company to build its line on the right of way of the railroad company between New Orleans and Lafayette, 144 miles. The right was awarded, damages assessed and paid into the court and the case appealed in the interest of the Western Union Telegraph company, which claimed an exclusive right of way under its contracts of the usual character. To-day's decision establishes the right of the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph company. The motion of the Western Union company to remove the case to the federal court, was denied.

Fully five hundred persons went by the Muncie route, one hundred and fifty by the Warsaw and about forty by the Grand Rapids. Kind Words from Judge Taylor. The following letter from our fellow-townsmen, Judge R. S. Taylor, is reproduced from the Indianapolis Journal of this morning:

FORT WAYNE, Ind., Nov. 28.

W. H. MILLER, of the Committee of Arrangements.

DEAR SIR:—It is with deep regret that I find it impossible to be present at the last meeting, of which your telegram advises me. I hope it may be largely attended.

No other men know each other so well as lawyers. And in all the assemblies of the people that will be held in memory of the deceased vice president, there will nowhere be present so true an appreciation of the qualities of the man himself as in the meeting of the bar of Indiana. As governor, senator, vice president he was known to all the world, and his fame in those high places is part of the common heritage of the American people. But as a lawyer he was, in a peculiar sense, our associate, our friend, our brother.

I accord to him a place on the highest seat in our profession. He was my ideal of an advocate. His style was clear, calm, dignified to the border of reserve, and yet dangerously persuasive. There are few great orators who are safe patterns for others. Usually their success is due largely to some striking idiosyncrasy or peculiarity of style or manner, which can be caricatured, but not imitated. Not so with Mr. Hendricks. He had no mannerisms—no tricks of speech, no oddities of thought. His oratory was clean, strong, convincing, persuasive English, without a touch of metropolitan ornament. His speeches were fit models for us all, and, as models, safe to imitate however impossible to emulate.

He was toward me an older brother in a family too large for close intimacy all around; but no kinder one ever stood in that relation.

I desire to express my concurrence in whatever action may be taken by the meeting. Sincerely yours,

R. S. TAYLOR.

Frank Robbe and the Mule.

The Denison, Texas, Herald-News, contains the following of a person well known to the citizens of Fort Wayne: "After Dr. Lighthall gets through, the crowd generally leaves, but in doing so, they miss one of the best features of the entertainment. It is the great mimic, Prof. F. L. Robbe. He is really wonderful in his imitations of birds and animals; also of different musical instruments. Yesterday while amusing the crowd, a mule that was hitched to a wagon turned himself loose and brayed in his loudest tone, as much as to say, do that if you can. The professor looked at the bold animal for a few moments, a look of sorrow overspreading his face, for he felt sorry for the poor beast. He threw upon his mouth and brayed until the mule became ashamed of himself and started for home, satisfied that there is one animal that can beat him braying."

THE OLD CANAL.

The Wabash and Erie canal, that in the childhood of Indiana, served as a nursing bottle for the young giant developing its resources and making manifest the splendid possibilities of the most productive state in the union, has gone into the mire and yellow leaf, slipped into a neglected old age, and from being the pride and glory of all Hoosierdom, is now only the object of their sneers and execrations. The Delphi Times, in commenting upon its present dilapidation, remarks that the old canal bed through this city and as far north as the river, presents a complete illustration of the ruin wrought by the ravages of time. From the principal highway of commerce that developed a state, it has fallen into a condition of not only absolute uselessness but into an unquestioned nuisance. Stagnant water accumulates in the lower places and is repulsive even to the wabbling duck and the wandering goose. The old tow-path that once resounded with the "thwack" of the mule-driver's lash, has melted away and in places is too narrow to afford a path for a marauding pig. Throughout its length there isn't water enough to wet the rudder of the "Minnie Bell" or the "Lillie Dale," the pride of early navigators, and all the canal water that could be accumulated wouldn't wet down a cocktail for an old-fashioned captain. The old guard-lock has decayed and will afford no protection against the next high water, and there is a little or nothing to prevent the Wabash from changing its course and coming down the canal like a tidal wave. The glory of the old canal has passed away and in a few years will live only in the memories of the oldest inhabitants—and the stories of the early minstrel who related the celebrated tragedy where "The chambermaid and three men more Took to flight on a sycamore."
